Some thoughts on Luther and the 500th anniversary of the Reformation

Luther entered the monastery at Erfurt, was ordained, and became a professor at a new little university at Wittenberg. The year was 1512. He was a master at Latin, Greek, and Hebrew. He began giving lectures on the Bible.

Lecturing from the original language of the Scriptures opened a whole new world to him and caused him to seriously question the shape of the Christian church in his day. By 1517, he was ready to debate the issues with the scholars. So, on All Saints' Eve, Hallowed Eve, October 31, which we call Halloween, he placed his 95 arguments, called theses, on the village bulletin board: the Castle Church doors in Wittenberg.

That's the place and time. And Luther was the person, who more than any other person, re-formed the Christian church.

Had it not been for a couple of things brewing at that time, the incident would have remained a "tempest in a teapot." It would have been just a scholarly debate in Latin in some lecture hall among the educated elite of the day. But Gutenberg had invented the printing press, and German printers were looking for something to publish. The political mood of the day called for an overthrow of the Holy Roman Empire's control. Nationalism was running high. Those 95 theses, translated into the language of the people, spread like wildfire. The battle of the Reformation was on for good. The floodgates of God's grace had not been opened this wide for the last 1,000 years. The shape of the Christian church would never be the same.

Martin Luther actually "re-formed" the church into its earlier form. He called for the more original shape of Christianity in three areas: Bible, priesthood, and salvation.

Luther asked that the Scriptures be placed in the hands of the people and in their language so that their lives could be shaped by it. He claimed everyone was a priest in God's sight and had a ministry to carry on in the world. He held up before the people of his day the fact that we are saved by God's gift of grace, not by living the life of perfection that would earn it for us.

You can still see the Augustinian monastery of the black friars at Erfurt where Luther tried in every way to appease God. You can go up to the second floor and see the cell where he lived and where one time he flogged himself all night long, almost to the point of death, in order to gain God's favor.

Then, Luther discovered it in the Scriptures, and it changed the shape of his faith and our church: "But by the free gift of God's grace all are right with him through Christ Jesus, who sets them free" (Romans 3:24).

The saddest part of Martin Luther's story is these new, exciting shapes of the church have become old, stagnant, and bloated. We desperately need a new re-forming of the church today. We need another Luther, Wesley, Calvin, or Booth right now and in this place. We need bold thinkers and protestors in direct touch with the Almighty God to call for new shape in our church now.

Think what it would mean to our own congregation if we took seriously those three shapes Luther insisted on in his day. Imagine what it would mean if all our members who had a Bible read it regularly and knew its contents. Think of the impact on our community if all our members here took their baptism seriously and carried out their own ministries in the world. Consider the joy evidenced in our worship and our stewardship emphasis if we all believed in the wonderful gift of God's grace as proclaimed by Martin Luther.

Any congregation which could re-form into that shape again would double in size, minister to thousands around it, have an abundance of offerings to share, and probably be on the cover of Time magazine within the year.

Put very bluntly, we have no right to use the name "protestant" in 2017 unless:

We are deeply versed and directed by the Scriptures.

We are in the world every day doing our own ministry.

We are just downright thrilled with God's free gift of grace and salvation so that we share it with everyone who will hold still to listen.

Often, however, we are like the Christians in Luther's day. We are Bible-ignorant. We expect the preacher to do our ministry. And we are plain stingy with grace. We still try to earn our salvation and carry an unnecessary burden of guilt.

Martin Luther pointed out the abuses in the church in his day and called for a re-forming of Christianity. Not only did the world's largest protestant denomination grow from his life, but he gave a new shape to Christianity. It's a free way. It's a way centered on personal faith. It's a way of individual responsibility.

At the Diet of Worms in 1521, Luther took his famous stand. When asked to denounce what he had written calling for a change in the church and of Christianity, he stood before the emperor and said: "Here I stand, I can do no other, God help me. Amen."

We ought to be in the lineage of this reformer, calling for continual re-forming and changing of the church. We ought to be a dynamic organization adjusting to whatever time and geography in which we find ourselves. We ought to make relevant the good news to whatever the contemporary situation.

We ought to be ashamed of ourselves if we use the names Lutheran and protestant and yet try to keep everything the way it was when we were growing up. We must never try to freeze this dynamic church in any age or place. We who are in the lineage of the Reformation have abuses to point out and change to work for as well. We must be 21st century protestors. It's a different age now. We must find ways to hold up the cross of Jesus Christ for this time.

Luther would be pleased with the mood of our day. He would like the new direction in 2017 of seeking out unity of purpose and mission again. We no longer are "Catholichaters" as some have been. We recognize each other as true brothers and sisters in Christ - one in baptism. We look forward to the time when we cannot only join hands in our ministry, mission, and baptism, but can kneel at God's altar to receive the sacrament of Holy Communion. This would best show our oneness.

According to Louis Cranach's paintings, those Saxon Germans were homely people. But one born November 10, 1583, in Eisleben, Germany, to Hans and Margaret Luder gave a beautiful new shape to the Christian church. His Reformation made the church Bible-centered and everyone a priest. It filled the church with God's grace and forgiveness. The form of the church wasn't rigid either. The church continually protested the wrong of its day and reshaped itself to be relevant to its people and time.

Luther was only in the town of Eisleben a couple times - when he was born and when he died. He probably died of heart failure. In those last moments, he was asked if he wanted to remain steadfast to Christ and the doctrine he had preached. Luther answered with a distinct and clear "Jawohl" - "Yes, indeed!" So may we.

As we enter the month of October; we enter a time of celebrating the 500th anniversary of the Reformation. Throughout the month we will be looking at the life, death and ministry of Martin Luther focusing on the Word of God Luther sought to proclaim and remind us to proclaim as the central focus of the church and its ministry.

We begin the month by focusing on "The Word"

October 8 we look at the Birth of Luther

October 15th the Death of Luther

October 22 the Augsburg Confession

October 29 The celebration of the Reformation (One service at 10:00)

In November we turn our focus to Stewardship. Our theme this year is Live simply. We experience change at a rapid rate. Along with change comes the pressure to upgrade our homes, cars, technology, possessions education, and vocations. At the same time, we are encouraged to economize, or perhaps we are forced to consider doing so because of our circumstances. In this dichotomy, we long for a simpler way and less demanding life.

God can help us with all this! We hear lots of talk, but we also want to hear God talk. As our congregation uses the Live Simply stewardship emphasis, listen for God's voice above the clutter. The Live Simply emphasis offers a worship emphasis on Following Jesus, Acting Together, and Sharing enough.

Paul shares his simple secret of contentment in Philippians 4 when he says that he can do all thing through Christ. As our congregation learns to more fully follow and rely on Jesus while loving and serving in community, we can experience the joy of a simple yet generous and abundant life and faith – life the really is life.

Women of the ELCA

Our Saviour's Women of the ELCA will again be sponsoring its' annual Soup and Baked Food Sale on Election Day, November 7. Doors open at 6 a.m. Proceeds from this sale are used to fund our various mission projects.

We invite all women (and men, if they like to cook and bake!) to contribute to the sale. Sign-up sheets will be available on the Women of the ELCA table in the narthex for you to indicate what type of food(s) you will be donating and/or if you are available to assist on the day of the sale.

All types of soups and chili are very popular. Some provide soup in crock pots which enables us to sell in single serving or quart containers. (If you bring soup/chili in a crock pot, we ask that you provide a soup ladle marked with your name, as well.) Others provide soup already bottled in quart containers. (In that case, we ask that you pack the quart containers in an ice chest if possible.) Soups should be brought to church on the day of the sale, as early as possible.

Among baked food products the following items are very popular: pies, nut breads, yeast breads or rolls, brownies or cookies (pre-packaged, at least six to a package). Baked goods can be brought to church on Monday evening between 6:30 and 7:30 p.m. or during the day on Tuesday.

Members of Our Saviour have always been so generous in their contributions to this fund raiser. We thank you for that generosity!
